MARSHA WALPOLE

I have held many roles in my 30+ years as a Democratic Party activist, but none more solemn and important than that of Presidential Elector. It would be a privilege to be chosen as one of the 538 people in our country convened in December 2020 to officially elect the 46th President of the United States. I would be honored to be an Elector for Joe Biden if (when) he wins North Carolina on his path to be President, because he is a man of humility, empathy and courage. I humbly ask for your vote today.

REBEKAH WHILDEN

Rebekah Whilden is a true North Carolina Democrat: Rocky Mount born, Asheville bred, and Boone educated. Rebekah has been a Democratic volunteer since she was 8 years old. Since then, she's worked for Democrats across the state, including Deborah Ross, Dan McCready, Gwen Wisler and frontline General Assembly candidates like Brandon Lofton. Rebekah Whilden is a five-year Young Democrats board member, and won the Young Democrat of the Year award in 2018. She's stood up for women's rights at the General Assembly, protested Pat McCrory's dangerous policies, and marched with many of you this past weekend in Charlotte. Rebekah is passionate about environmental justice and climate change. Early in her career, she worked to shut down one of Duke Energy's coal plants in Western North Carolina, and recently passed comprehensive climate change legislation in Washington, DC.

JESSE GOSLEN

It would be my honor to cast one of North Carolina's 15 electoral votes on December 14, 2020, for our next president Joe Biden. Since being inspired by Howard Dean in 2003, I have worked tirelessly from the precinct to the Executive Council. I will cast our vote in honor of all of you working at the grassroots level to elect Democrats. A vote for me is a vote for all of you working in the trenches. Vote, Jesse Goslen for elector.

ANTHONY FOXX

Thanks to all of the delegates to the 2020 North Carolina Democratic Party State Convention. We are in unprecedented times—facing a global pandemic, a battered economic and yet another example of the urgent need to confront police brutality and racism. What's really important right now is electing people who are up to the task, and I am proud to support my friend, Joe Biden, for President and the entire slate of Democratic candidates, including Governor Roy Cooper, U.S. Senate candidate Cal Cunningham and so many others. Once the popular vote is decided, the electors cast the Constitutionally required vote to elect our nation's next President, and it would be a tremendous honor to cast a ballot for Joe Biden, a President who will use science, help build our economy anew and bring us together as a state and a nation.
